Fate of Next Israeli Government May Hinge on 13 Elderly Sages

By William Claibome

JERUSALEM - The fate of the next government of Israel may hinge on 13 bearded and elderly men called the council of Torah

The council of sages, a court composed of revered rabbis, yeshiva (Talmudic school) heads and scions of Hassidic dynasties, is the governing body of the ultra-Orthodox Augudat Israel Party, which holds the key to the formation of a coalition government by either Prime Minister Menachem Begin's ruling Likud or the opposition La-bor Party.

Neither the Likud nor Labor can form a government without the six Augudat Israel members of the Knesset (parliament) who were elected in Tuesday's national election, since the two major parties ended up in a virtual tie. According to incomplete returns, Labor won 49 seats and the Likud 48, but uncounted ballots from the armed services were expected to create a deadlock. Sixty-one votes in the Knesset are needed to form a govpresenting demands for concessions on future social legislation that affects Orthodox observance. The council of Torah sages will ul-timately decide whether the party will rejoin the Likud coalinon or turn to the Labor Party as it traditionally did before Labor was oust-ed by Mr. Begin in 1977.

Two Major Demands

Augudat leader Menachem Strip. ty is making two major demands: an end to all exceptions granted to Jews to work on the Sabbath, except those involved in security work; and a resolution of the controversial "who is a Jew" issue of official recognition of only Orthodox conversions to Judaism.

After initial contacts with Likud leaders, Mr. Porush said be was confident a coalition agreement could be reached. However, the Labor Party also was talking with Augudat leaders. To form a gov-ernment, Labor also would have to win the support of the National Religious Party and several small

U.S. Denies a Shift On F-16s for Israel

WASHINGTON — The administration, reversing an earlier statement, said on Thursday that all deliveries of F-16 fighter-bombers to Israel will be based on whether Jerusalem violated U.S. law by using such planes to destroy an Iraqi nuclear reactor.

Under the agreement, $1 billion of the assets are to be placed under the jurisdiction of a tribunal at The Hague for claims settlements. The agreement provides that Iran must replenish the fund whenever it falls below $500 million.

The unanimous ruling affirmed the president's authority to void U.S. court judgments won by American companies with money claims against Iran, and to allow those claims to be settled by an international tribunal.

The court upbeld a lower-court ruling sustaining the president's power to settle the international crisis by suspending private suits against Iran and transferring the assets out of the country.

In a unanimous opinion, the court said that former President Jimmy Carter was empowered to prevent American companies from ursuing claims against Iran in

Suits Nullified

To secure the release of the hostages on Jan. 20, Mr. Carter agreed to nullify an estimated 450 private suits for claims against Iran. Under the agreement, all but 51 billion of the funds must be trans-ferred to Iran by July 19. Mr. Breuer (prounced BROYer) made small objects of tubular steel early in his career and vast buildings of concrete later on. In each case, be showed an interest in bending technology to sculptural purposes. One of modern architecture's internationally recognized masters, he began his career designing furniture, in 1920, at the Bauhaus in Weimar, Germany, where be produced, among other designs, some chairs that are today considered 20th-century classics. But as an architect Mr. Breuer took on projects of enormous size and scale. Among his major build-ing works were the Paris headquarters of Unesco, 1953-58; the IBM Research Center in La Gaude, France. 1960-61; Saint John's Abbey in Collegeville, Minn., 1953-61, and the Whitney Museum on Madison Avenue, 1963-66, his best-known work in New York. where be bad based his practice Named for the painter Kandinsky, who purchased the first one, the chair was inspired by the tubular steel curve of bicycle handlebars. It bas been frequently imitated.

French Aide Discusses Takeovers By Axel Krause International Henski Tribune

PARIS - The French government fully intends to pursue nationalization of leading industrial groups, but the terms of its future involvement, including new government shareholdings, could vary from one company to another, Jean Le Garrec, state secretary for expansion of the public sector, said in an interview on Thursday.

The guiding principle of the Socialist government's approach to nationalizations is linking an expanded state role in key industries and the development of the government's emerging social policy, Mr. Le Garrec said.

The major aims of the policy, be said, included the reduction of working time and expanding the rights of workers. Another key is striving to avoid what the official described as "bureaucratization" of French business.

NEW YORK - Shaking off the national pessimism that affected the country in 1979 and 1980, the American public again thinks the United States will be better off in the future than it is now, the latest New York Times-CBS News Poll

In 1979, for example, 24 percent of the public thought that the country would be better off in five years while 43 percent believed it would be worse off, a reversal of a 20-year polling pattern of optimis-tic expectations. Storm Kills 145 In Philippines United Press Into

MANILA - Relief agencies said Thursday that 145 persons were killed in floods and mud slides caused by a tropical storm that hit the central Philippines on Wednesday with beavy rains and center winds of 40 miles (64 kilometers) an hour.

Thirty persons were injured and 12 were reported missing. As the storm swept out of the country, rescue teams searched villages at the foot of the Mayon volcano, 180 nules southeast of Manila, where rain loosened volcanic debris, causing an avalanche that de-stroyed 597 houses and left 3,602 persons homeless.

Floods ravaged nine towns, destroying waterworks pipes, a flood control project and wide stretches of rice fields, a Red Cross spokesman said. The storm was the worst to hit the Philippines since a typhoon killed 101 persons last November.

Because of the changed nature of the election campaign, it is inaccurate to describe the new men as "Kania loyalists" in the old sense of owing their careers to him. But it does seem that a significant majority regard him as the leader best qualified to unite the party at a time of crisis.

Mr. Kania's authority has also been boistered enormously by what was generally regarded here as a Soviet-inspired attempt to get rid of him. Rank-and-file party members rallied around him last month following the publication of a harshly worded letter from the Kremlin to the Polish Central Committee — and he has emerged politically stronger as a result. tion order by a French judge to re-turn 12 Spanish Basques to their homeland for possible prosecution. Most of the delegates will be attending their first congress. An overwhelming majority are aged between 30 and 50. This means in effect the rise to power of a new generation of Poles whose entire adult years have been shaped by Communist rule.

This new generation of party members has only dim memories of World War II and the Stalinist period that followed. Its representatives are critical, ontspoken, and anxious to defend what they regard as Poland's national interests.

Most of them are pragmatic men willing to enter negotiations with other political forces in Po-land like the Roman Catholic Church and the Solidarity trade to is worth remembering, however, that they are Communist politicians with ambitions of their own. Now that they are on the point of acquiring power, they have no intention of simply abdicating it to Solidarity.

Thatcher Government Faces Stiff Test As Unemployment Rate Continues Rise

By R.W. Apple Jr.
New York Times Service

LONDON - Month after month, the number of people unemployed in Britain continues its seemingly inexorable increase. Last week, the total reached 2,680,977, according to official fig-ures, the highest number in the postwar era and more than 11 percent of the work force.

In the next few months, the fig-ure seems certain to reach 3 million. Worse still for the Conservative government of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, joblessness is beginning to mount rapidly in the Tory heartland of southeast Eng-land where the economy had remained robust until recently. For the first time, many of Mrs.

Thatcher's Cabinet colleagues are looking fearfully at the political calendar. In theory, no general election is required until the spring of 1984, but most politicians be-lieve she will probably choose October, 1983.

'Two Years Left'

"By the time we get back from our holidays," a senior Tory mused, "we will have two years left until the campaign starts. That gives us a year to develop a new program and put it in place and a year to see the results."

"It might be just enough," he added. "The problem is that she doesn't seem to want a new program, not at the moment, anyway."
Similar sentiments resulted in a full-dress Cabinet review of the economic situation recently. It produced no changes

As a consequence, "wets" — the rather derisive title given to leading Tories who doubt the wisdom Thatcherite economics - are publicly expressing misgivings.

'Doctrinsire Approach'

In New York, Peter Walker, the agriculture minister, warned against "any doctrinaire ap-proach." He said, "this is not a decade for Western governments to become too fascinated by any economic theory."
His remarks were taken as a direct attack on Mrs. Thatcher's monetarism, beightened by the absence of praise for ber.

The poll, published by the New Standard newspaper, said that if a general election were held now, 39 percent of the votes would go to any alliance of the Social Democrats and the Liberals, 32 percent to La-bor (at present the largest opposition party) and 27 percent to the ruling Conservative Par-

Republican Party: "Don't just do something, stand there." Mr. Patten, a former research director for the party, said progress had been made in bringing down inflation and that the somewhat weaker pound permitted British industry to compete more effectively for export orders. But he called for increased gov-ernment spending on capital proj-ects in high unemployment areas and a big job-training program for unemployed young people. Political Challenge

Mrs. Thatcher is more likely to choose to meet the political chal-lenge as she did when high unem-ployment was debated in the House of Commons - with an intransigent assertion that ber policy is the only policy.

During the debate, she routed Michael Foot, the opposition lead-er. She described his speech as "disgraceful" because it offered no real alternative program. She rejected reflation - the choice of the new French government — as "inflation on top of in-flation" and again said she would not accept an incomes policy, ei-ther voluntary or mandatory. So far, the prime minister has managed to limit the damage. Normally, 2.5-million unemployed would mean a huge deficit for the government in the polls.

Labor in Disarray

But the Labor Party is in such disarray, so preoccupied with its own splits and squabbles, that it has found it impossible to present a credible alternative.

Labor remains embroiled in a

Mr. Atkins said the council would be composed of the prov-ince's tt members of the British Parliament, its members of the European Partiament and local district councillors.

He added that be hoped to convene the proposed council "around the turn of the year." The move is the most recent in a long string of abortive British altempts to restore some semblance of political stability in Northern Ireland, torn by political and secan emotive bunger strike by eight frish Republican guerrillas in the Maze Prison near Belfast. The hunger strikers belong to the IRA's Provisional wing and the smaller frish National Liberation Army. Both movements are fighting to end British rule in Northern Ireland and reunite the nation. The hunger strikers Wednesday rejected a British offer for im provements in the prison, calling it "acrogant and callous." They demand the British treat them as political prisoners rather than criminais. The British refuse.

Mennwhile an IRA spokesman reported that the families of the hunger strikers had requested a meeting with the new Irish premier. Garret FitzGerald. Mr. FitzGerald declared after he was elected Tuesday that ending the hunger strike was a major priority for his Fine Gael-Labor coalition government. The spokesman said: "The families believe FitzGerald should take up the issue immediately because it is clear the British don't recognize the importance of it." Political Factor

He noted that Kieran Doherty, 25, was one of two hunger strikers elected to the Irish parliament in the Republic's general election June 11 and stressed that if he dies the opposition Fianna Fail Party could win a special election in his Cavan-Mnnagahan district. U.S. House Panel Quietly Cuts Nicaragua Aid

The Associated Press WASHINGTON - A House subcommittee has moved without fanfare to halve the Reagan administration's fiscal 1982 request for economic aid to Nicaragua, cutting at the same time $17 million in military aid

The subcommittee on foreign operations of the House Appropriations Committee last week cut $20 million in economic assistance from Nicaragua, aides confirmed Wednesday. The panel voted to retain $21.6 million for development assistance, food and Peace Corps programs.

The El Salvador military aid, also acted on last week, was part of a $982-million package of direct low-interest loans sought by the administration to finance arms purchases by 15 countries. The cuts may be offset through additional loan guarantees approved by the panel under the regular foreign military sales program.

U.S. to Seek Safeguards on Soviet Gas Line

WASHINGTON — The Reagan administration will insist that its Western European allies guard against political pressure by Moscow if they proceed with plans to buy more Soviet natural gas, U.S. officials Thursday. They did not rule out the possibility that the United States would want the project halted.

The officials said that the administration had almost reached a posttion on the Soviet plan, costing $11 billion to $15 billion, to pipe up to 40 billion cubic meters of Siberian gas a year to Western Europe by the mid-1980s. The Ottawa economic summit meeting later this month will enable the United States to make clear its views on the Siberian gas

If Washington agrees that the project should go forward, the officials said, the administration will at least want the European clients to take a lower volume of gas and ensure that it was used in ways that did not make the countries vulnerable to politically motivated supply restraints.

U.S. Panel Says New DC-9 Needs Crew of 2

WASHINGTON — A special presidential task force concluded on Thursday that the new McDonnell Douglas DC-9 Super 80 aircraft can be flown safely with a two-person crew, and that adding a third crew member is not justified on safety grounds.

The decision was a blow to the Air Line Pilots Association, which claims that three crew members are needed in the new generation of twin-engined jetliners now in production.

The task force recommended that the Federal Aviation Administration improve and strengthen its procedure for determining the minimum crew that is safe for operation of aircraft. The FAA certified the "Super 80" aircraft for two crew members last August. ALPA, the Umited States' largest pilots' union with 33,000 members, went to court in an.

The Associated Press
GENEVA — Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, chief U.S. delegate to the United Nations, Thursday criticized as insufficient the degree of political freedom in South Korea, one of the countries in which the Reagan administration has sought to exert "quiet diplomacy" in addressing suspected ıman rights abuses. . .

While lavishly praising South Korean economic successes as examples of benefits of economic freedom, Mrs. Kirkpatrick said at a news conference that the Seoul government "does not have as high of a degree of political freedom at all as we would recommend or as we wish it did."

Earlier, in a speech to the UN Economic and Social Council meeting Geneva, Mrs. Kirkpatrick suggested that human rights advocates should consider as their leading priority the world's 10 million refugees, whom she said are "the most definitive manifestation of who is denied the minimum freedom and human dignity for survival."

Political Course

The suspension of the fivemonth-long negotiations was seen by some political observers as the only possible course for Premier George Rallis' government in view of the elections. Haig Strains Seen As 'Fact of Life'

By Steven R. Weisman New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - White House officials say they have con-cluded that difficult, sometimes strained relations with Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. are "a fact of life" in the Reagan administration, but they emphasize that Mr. Haig has the president's full

Because of the situation's sensitivity, several White House officials asked to remain anonymous if they discussed Mr. Haig. These aides said that "frustration" had been felt at the highest levels, even by Mr. Reagan's three top deputics, James A. Baker 3d, Edwin Meese 3d and Michael K. Deaver. Discontent with Mr. Haig reportedly has been a subject of recent discussion among White House aides, and it has come up increasingly in interviews with re-

Tension between the State Department and White House have been a part of several recent administrations. In the present situation, the officials maintain that differences of personality, not policy, are the cause of difficulties with Mr. Haig, even though some policy differences are said to exist within the administration.

The White House aides' frustration is said to derive, in part, from what they consider a tendency by the press to magnify even minor episodes of friction. Some officials refused to comment on the Haig situation, saying they did not want to be part of still another news ar-

UN Delegate Criticized

Several senior presidential aides agreed that new strain had arisen last week after reports quoting criticism by two State Department officials of Jeane J. Kirkpatrick, the delegate to the United Nations.

The State Department officials, who accompanied Mr. Haig on his two-week trip to the Far East, were critical of the way Mrs. Kirkpatrick had handled negotiations leading np to a Security Council resolution condemning Israel for its raid on Iraq's nuclear power

Mr. Reagan was reported to be so annoyed by the criticism that be threw down his copy of The New York Times and telephoned Mrs. Kirkpatrick to reassure ber of his support, Mr. Haig disavowed the criticism and reportedly told Mr. Reagan that be had been embar-rassed by it.

Meanwhile, the White House position of national security impressed people at the White adviser Richard V. Allen, whom rival for the president's ear in forcign policy, seems to have been strengthened.

Mr. Allen, reportedly incensed by an article in The Washington by an article in the wasnington Star of State Department criticism of himself and Mr. Meese, used the criticism to rally support among his colleagues at the White House, officials said. "You do not Xerox acticles that criticiza neutrals and articles that criticize yourself, and pass them around at senior staff meetings, because you're a maso-chist," observed a Reagan aide, re-ferring to Mr. Allen.

Allen's Role Broadened

In an act apparently planned be-fore the latest flurry over Mr. Haig, Mr. Allen — who had had practically no public role — was authorized by his superiors to speak more freely to the press and speak more freely to the press and public and to provide what one aide called "the presidential perspective" on foreign policy. Last week in Los Angeles, be went so far as to tell reporters that be did not understand whet Mr. Haig meant by saying that Chinese-American relations had been declining for three years.

Mr. Allen said the criticism of Mrs. Kirkpatrick had brought out, tensions that had subsided in the months since a series of initial difficulties with Mr. Haig. The earlier problems arose from the secretary's well-publicized unhappiness with the naming of Vice President Busb as "crisis coordinator," and Mr. Haig's declaration that be was in charge while Mr. Reagan was hospitalized after the attempt on his life March 30.

As one official put it, "The pre-vailing view at the White House is to try like hell to make the thing work." This official said tensions had been eased somewhat because Mr. Haig had convinced White House aides that he had not instigated the criticism of Mrs. Kirkpa-

Several officials also said that Mr. Haig's personality, which they described as "volatile" and "unusual," occasionally increased tensions. Some officials said, for example, that Mr. Haig appeared shaken and exhausted when be spoke to reporters in Los Angeles after reporting to the president on his trip to the Far East.

Questioned about State Department criticism of Mrs. Kirkpatrick, Mr. Haig sarcastically told reporters, "It's your controversy—it's not mine." Several officials said this display contrasted sharply with the calm manner Mr. Haig shows in private, and which has

"I tell those people who can correct themselves to separate themselves from the monafegin who have revolted against Islam." Monafeque means hypocrites, and is usually used by the clergy as a reference to the Mujahaddin.

The ayatollah said of Abolhassan Bani-Sadr, who was fired as president of Iran on June 22: "Bani-Sadr did not separate himself from them [the "hypocrites"], and God knows how many times warned him these wolves would destroy him.... I am asking these people to repent before it is too late. Don't swim against the waves. because you will be smashed."

Referring to the bombing, Ayatollah Khomeini told the vietims' families; "It is a question of the United States and Islam. It is a question of an American movement against Islam.... It is the duty of all our people to watch every suspicious action and to find the saboteurs who have hidden and are planning further sabotage... From now on, all of you are members of the intelli-

The same theme was taken up by Thursday's edition of the ruling party's newspaper, Islamic Repub-lic, which asked citizens to report information they beard "in buses,

Ethnic Refugees Ejected From Vietnam, Disillusioned by China, Seek New Home

Washington Post Service HONG KONG - Some ethnic Chinese refugees who were forced to leave Vietnam over a two-year period for resettlement in China are now turning their backs on their Communist motherland.

UAW Rejoins AFL-CIO After A 13-Year Split

New York Times Service DETROIT - The United Auto Workers union has formally rejoined the AFL-CIO, 13 years after philosophical and policy differences caused it to bolt the country's main labor federation.

The return on Wednesday was prompted by a desire on both sides to strengthen labor's role in U.S. industry and politics at a time of economic distress and mounting conservative successes at federal and state levels.
"We decided we should do what unions always do, which is to be united," said Don Stillman, the auto union's chief spokesman. The 1.2-million UAW, which will swell the AFL-CIO to nearly 15-million members, will become the federation's second-largest member group.

The auto union's influence on the federation, which was at issue when it broke away in 1968, remains to be seen, however. The re-turn of the Auto Workers was preceded by months of negotiations between Lane Kirkland, president of the AFL-CIO, and Douglas A. Fraser, head of the Auto Workers.

Allan A. Ryan, Jr., the director of the Office of Special Investiga-tions of the Justice Department, said Wednesday that the Immigration and Naturalization Service, in s letter delivered that day, directed Mr. Artukovic to report in Los Angeles by next Wednesday to be handed a deportation order.

He could be deported within 72 hours of his appearance, but he probably will request a review by the U.S. Court of Appeals. Such a petition would stay the deportasion by the immigration appeals board determined that Mr. Artu-kovic was a leading Nazi criminal during World War II and a 1978 law says that Nazi war criminals cannot claim deportation stays on the grounds that they would be subject to political persecution.

A spokesman for the Yugoslav Embassy said Wednesday that his government regards Mr. Artukovic as a war criminal and be would face trial if deported.

Justice Department officials denied that the action in the Artukovic case had anything to do with the indietment last month of a group of cight Croatian nationalists. Despite the intense level of political controversy over the budget last week in Washington, which took place while the poll was being conducted, there was a high level of public uncertainty. Whatever the vagueness on immediate political issues, there were several clear measurements of a positive, bopeful national mood. Along with the question on wbether the country as a wbole would be in a better situation in five years, optimism about personal lives had strengthened.

Good Times Ahead Another measure of hopefulness came in the continuing improvement of expectations about family finances. Thirty-nine percent of the public expected to be better off in a year, while only 13 percent ex-pected to be worse off. The rest were either undecided or thought Bomb Avoided

China to Import Grain, U.S. Says

Reuters
TOKYO — China has indicated that it will probably import about 15 million tons of grain a year in the next few years, with more than half coming from the United States, Richard Lyng, U.S. deputy secretary of agriculture, said in To-kyo on Thursday.

Mr. Lyng, who has just spent 10 days in China, said that Chinese

The United States could supply around 8 million tons of gram this year, mostly wheat and small amounts of soybeans and corn and possibly more in the future, Mr. Lyng said. The United States be gan a four-year agreement this year to supply China annually with 6 million tons of grain.

The EEC Afghan Initiative

The obvious question raised by the EEC initiative on Afghanistan is whether the Soviet Union will agree to pull out its troops without a guarantee that it can dominate the government left behind. But the answer is as obscure as the question is obvious. Certainly, no one in the West knows and it is quite possible that no one in the Kremlin knows. What is known, although only in a sketchy way, is that the 75,000 to 100,000 Red Army soldiers in Afghanistan are being nibbled at mercilessly by the increasingly inventive and efficient Afghan freedom fighters. The Russians cao always send more men and materiel into Afghanistan, but from Moscow the mountain valleys of the Hindu Kush must be starting to look like bottomless pits.

Nevertheless, the Soviet response to the European Community proposal - which the Russians view as British because they refuse to deal with the EEC as a political entity does not seem to foreshadow a disposition toward compromise. For one thing, the Soviet Union has held firmly to its position that internal Alghan affairs are not subject to negotiation. Since the internal situation is the disease and international aspects such as the refugee problem are only symptoms, it seems unlikely that talks on that basis would be productive. There is also disagreement over participation of the Soviet-sponsored government of Babrak Karmal, but that's the sort of thing that diplomats are good at, so an acceptable formula probably can be found.

The next question, then, is whether any talks are better than none. If Lord Carrington concludes after his visit to Moscow beginning Sunday that there is some bargaining room that could lead to a solution acceptable to the Afghans themselves and to the other involved parties - including the Soviet Union, the United States, the EEC governments and Pakistan - then the process should go forward. But if Moscow remains adamant about limiting the talks to what are, after all. peripheral matters, it would be better not to get involved in a futile exercise.

There are temptations for the Europeans, who carried out the initiative, and the Americans, who may have stimulated it. Negotiations, no matter how sterile, would ease some of the tension that has complicated East-West relations since the Red Army invaded Afghanistan in December, 1979. They might possibly make it easier for theater nuclear talks to get under way and for the Salt process to resume. And most likely, perhaps, they would improve the atmosphere for trade. The Soviet Union and the Europeans alike would probably find it easier, for example, to proceed with the vast project being negotiated to pipe Siberian natural gas to Western Europe. But the drawbacks of entering into such negotiations, if they seemed genuinely unpromising, would almost certainly outweigh the advantages. It could suggest that the West was participating because internal pressures for arms talks were becoming unbearable for some Western governments, and because Western economies are so dependent on East-bloc trade that the Soviet Uoion can use it as a political lever. Furthermore, the Soviet Union would quite possibly be the major beneficiary of precisely those arms and trade advantages that European leaders regard as incentives for talks. As a result, Moscow would again be able to demonstrate its uncanny ability to get something for nothing.

Days for Democracy

This week one might perfectly well have ex-claimed, "Happy Second of July!" For jumping the gun on the 205th celebration of the nation's birthday, the authority could have beeo none other than John Adams. "The Second Day of July, 1776," he predicted a day later, "will be ... celehrated by succeeding Generations as the great anniversary Festival." John Adams assumed, incorrectly, that Americans would commemorate the Cootinental Congress' vote for independence, taken on July 2, and not the adoption two days later of the Declaration that justified the break with England.

When the founders declared the United States independent, chronology was less important to them than consistency. The first public proclamation of the Declaration in Philadelphia came on July 8, and not until July 19 did Congress vote to bave the document inscribed on parchment. Then it took until Aug. 2 for most of the "original" signers to affix their names to the parchment, with one even delaying until November, possibly as a hedge until he had worked out the bet ting odds on successful insurrection.

The image of an immaculate parchmentsigning that occurred precisely on July 4, in short, was a later invention that passed into American myth and memory, if only because it reinforced the desired impression of decisiveness among the Revolutionary leaders.

No rational commentary on American conditions ever prepares us adequately for that flurry of super-patriotic pronouncement known as the Fourth of July oration. For many people, the awesome self-assurance oisplayed in such orations seems so out of step with daily reality that, in recent years, the genre itself has been discredited. What the skeptics fail to understand is the degree to which in any given year such Iodependence Day speeches have reflected national anxieties as well as achievements.

Librarian of Congress Daniel Boorstin once aptly described the Fourth as "a festival of justification" during which such optimistic and ebullient oratioos reaffirming the country's oldest purposes inevitably display a vagueness of line between fact and hope, between what had actually happened and what ought to have happened." How could it be otherwise, when only recently has the American Revolution's evolving and partially disbursed legacy been made more fully available to blacks and others who were unrepresented at Philadelphia in 1776?

Still, at the heart of the Declaration of Independence there resides a patient confidence that the American yearning for political equality and self-government applies universally and, given time, will spread inexorahly across the world.

Thomas Jefferson wrote of these hopes often, the last time not long before his death on July 4, 1826, the 50th anniversary of Indedate of John Adams' death as well: "May [the Fourth of July] be to the world ... - to some parts sooner, to others later, but finally to all - the signal of arousing men to burst the chains ... and to assume the hlessings and security of self-government."

The world is far more crowded than in Thomas Jeffersoo's day not only with tyrannies hut in most of them, with embattled believers in those "certain inalienable Rights" of the 1776 Declaration. For their sake, although we cannot avoid coostant interplay with regimes that do oot derive "their just powers from the consent of the governed," our annual festival of justification compels us to remember that, above all else, we are in the democracy business.

A Market for Sansalt Stew

The day we read that the Food and Drug commissioner wants the food industry to reduce the amount of salt in processing and to reveal salt content on food labels. we were lunching with a friend who adheres militantly to a low-sodium diet.

When my doctor told me I might lower my blood pressure by cutting down sodium intake," he said, sprinkling some vinegar on his salad, "his attitude was perfunctory. He knows most people find it very hard to reduce enough to make their blood pressure go down - and not for lack of willpower. After a week or so without the saltshaker, you don't miss the taste; in fact, you discover that ordinary food tastes more interesting than you ever suspected.

"The reason it's still hard to reduce sodium intake is that salt and other forms of sodium are so pervasive. Salt is routinely added to canned vegetables; canned soups are a disaster. Forget mustard, ketchup and mayonoaise; bot dogs, cold cuts and cheese are out; pickles are deadly. Cakes, cookies and crackers will put your sodium into orbit, since baking soda is just as bad as salt. You can't even buy a safe loaf of bread.

"So my doctor was actually surprised when my blood pressure went down without medication that has dispiriting side effects. And I actually eat very well.

"The trick is to prepare salt-free foods in combinations that enhance their natural flavor. and to get to know some herbs and spices. You have to do some homework in books that list sodium contents and salt-free recipes. And you have to work overtime; I'm baking my own bread and making mustard. In fact, it's not avoiding salt that I resent; it's that extra hassle.

"And I don't understand why the government should have to pressure the food industry to reveal and reduce salt. Isn't there a big opportunity in the 50 million American hy pertensives? There are some 'special diet' products around, but they're overpriced and hard to find. Why can't the people who gave us Rice-a-Roni and Froot Loops give us the stuff I have to put together in my kitchen and call it Sweet Spaghetti or Sansalt Stew? Computers for the Farm

PRINCETON, Minn. — William C. Norris grew up on a Nebraska cattle and hog farm in the drought and depression 1930s. He started Control Data Corp. from scratch 24 years ago; today the computer firm and its subsidiaries boast $3.8 billioo in yearly sales. In the last decade Norris has plunged Control Data into an array of job-generating enterprises oo turf that most cor-troubled inner cities. Now, with customary audacity, Norris "returns" to the farm. but in this incarnation, be and Control Data proclaim what many people consider an antiquated gospel: that there is a promising future for small, family-run farms in America.

For a grass-roots glimpse of Norris plans in action, one has to visil Princeton, Minn. (population 2,500), where a prototype Control Data "agricultural busioess center" — a room full of computer terminals — is getting under way, and then visit some of the farming families around Princeton that Control Data is using to test the idea that com-puter-based rechnology can make start-up farming profitable, even in these days of sky-high land and equipment costs. Flying, as it does, against the precepts of agricultural economics, the Norris-Control Data scheme has to be considered a risky venture that won't prove its validity (or invalidity) for years.

But it has its true believers, and they make a good case. Conventional big-scale agriculture, says Norris, is far 100 dependent on capital equipment and fossil

By Neal R. Peirce fuels, and too vulnerable to the rising costs of petroleum, pumped inigation water and energy-based fertilizer.

The answer, for Norris, is in smaller units and more labor-intensive methods — "not a mule and 40 acres or back-breaking la-bor," but a return to more of a "closed loop" model in which each farm integrates its crop, livestock and other activities. Hasn't history proved such small, self-sufficient farms uneconomic? No. says Bryan Roth, Control Data's agricultural services manager. Big farms only look more economic. "Large farms more often succeed because they're well-managed and have sound information sys-tems." They are favored by feed suppliers, implement dealers, agriculture extension services and university-based research. We fiod small farmers just as capable of making decisions, but lacking the same information flow," Roth says.

Enter Control Data, with a variety of computer-based services designed to balance the scales. They are on display at Princeton in computerized question-and-answer courses and videotape. The small farmer can educate himself on every topic from feed-er pig production to raising honeybees, from nursery management to record keeping.

Entering key words will bring up answers to questions such as "What do I do when my lambs start shivering?" or "What bugs attack potatoes and how do I combat them?" A farmer can also use the Control Data computers as an electronic catalog of the latest farm technology.

Computer-based management systems are designed to make it easy for a farmer to keep linan-cial or production records to aid him with planting decisions, tax records and marketing.

Within a few years, Norris says, these services may be so easy to use that farmers will want computer terminals in their homes. Roth remarks that Con-trol Data can market its information-and-query services through "agricultural business centers" run by co-ops, banks, extension services or private entrepreneurs in farming communities across

The objective is crystal clear: "We want," Roth says, "to provide the information base to let people start, manage and profit from small farm operations." Norris adds: "We're not talking about 'hobby' farms that only provide subsistence for the family. We mean a family income in the $25,000-$30,00 range. We mean intensive, diversified farm-try's food chain."

To make it happen, Cootrol Data is plotting possible ways to get small farmers into markets that often freeze them out possibly by "networking" several hundred small producers together for coordinated selling. Networking by computer should be more efficient than farm co-op methods. Such services, Roth maiotains, would be economically priced, although he acknowledges that the entire package of Control Data income streams." One needn't own Control Data stock to welcome all this. If small-scale farming with com-puter backup is to have a fair try. the best force to have behind it is a profit-motivated corporation.

• In my view, the fundamental case for development assistance is the moral one. The whole of human history has recognized the principle—at least in the abstract—that the rich and the powerful have a moral obligation to assist the poor and the weak. That is what the sense of community is all about—any community: the community of the family, the community of the village, the community of the nation, the community of nations itself.

-Annual meeting, Nairobi, Sept. 24, 1973

The principal goals of development are to accelerate economic growth, and to eradicate what I have termed absolute poverty.

The two goals are intrinsically related, though governments are often tempted to pursue one without adequate attention to the other. But from a development point of view, that approach always fails in the end. The pursuit of growth without a reasonable concern for equity is ultimately socially destabilizing, and often violently so. And the pursuit of equity without a reasonable concern for growth merely tends to redistribute economic

A Call for Cooperation With a New Italian Premier

By Adolfo Battaglia

The writer has been a Republican Party member of the Italian Chamber of Deputies since 1972 and is chairman of the chamber's Finance and Treasury Committee.

ROME — Italians have two opinions about the new government of Premier Giovanni Spadolini, the secretary of the small Republican Party of Italy. The first is that his tenure means busioess as usual, and will last maybe six months. The second is that it represents the start of a long tide, of a deep change in the country's political life.

the Republican Party and the Socialist Parly, which is led by Bettino Craxi. These parties, logether with the Liberal and Social Democratic parties which orbit around them, account for 25 percent of the elector-ate. Republicans and Socialists, long quarrelsome political cousins, achieved unity during the 33-day crisis after the resignation of Arnaldo Forlani's government.

The idea that unites them is not particularly Machiavellian: They say that the Christian Democrats are worn out after 36 years in power and can no longer govern effectively, that the Communist Party is nomanageable in a Cabinet coalition, and that therefore only they can put Italy's house in order. The case is logical for anyone who doubts that Christian Democrats and Communists who are limping today can become sprinters tomorrow.

By the same logic, the program of the new government will differ from that of its 40 predecessors since World War II. Next Monday in parliament, when he seeks a vote of confidence for his government, Spadolini will not promise a thousand little things to everyone. He will present a short program focused on only four problems: terrorism. corruption, inflation and Italy's role in the Western alliance. His premise is that Italy can be said to be governed only if his Cabinet can make its mark in these four basic areas. He has stated privately that if he cannot do so he will resign. Communist Problem

In short, the Socialists and the Republicans intend to provide the capacity to govern that the Christian Democrats have lost and that the Communists do not have. This is a most ambitious attempt to become the long-term structural framework of a renewed political system.

Republicans, Socialists and Christian Democrats share a problem: The Communist Party is still strong, with 30 percent of the electorate and control of the strongest unions. No great industrial democracy can be governed without a broad consensus, some form of social contract. The battle against inflation cannot be waged in Italy, where the rate is about 20 percent, without an understanding with unions. Thus, Spadolini is asking for a curb on public expenditure and for an agreed rate of inflation that will serve as an upper limit on growth in the prices of public services and utilities, but also on labor ecists.

To achieve all his goals, including increased labor productivity, he needs cooperation from the unions and from Parliament. Both these needs require him to develop a working relationship with the Communist Party. He does not have very much to offer it. His main selling point is that he is the first premier is the bistory of the republic who does not belong to the conservative Roman Catholic party. This may not affect the relationship between state and church, but it should improve the relationship between the left and the government. Western Tradition

About the need for such an improvement the entire political establishment agrees, apart from a few extremists in various parties. And on the improvement will depend, to a great degree, the longevity of the new government. But Spadolini is known not ooly as an optimist but also as a remarkably lucky man. What is happening in Italy has bitle to do with France's recent experience. Francois Mitterrand brought four Communists into the Cabinet, creating a new form of coali-tion. Spadolini has kept the traditional coalition of the last 20 years, but has modified it in favor of the Republicans and the Socialists, who, unlike France's Socialists, do not majotain an alliance with the Communists.

Spadolini belongs to the political tradi-tion of the Republicans' Carlo Sforza, Italy's most important foreign minister right after the war, and Ugo La Malfa. This is the most pro-American tradition in Italy, with emphasis on European defense against Soviet expansionism. Precisely because of this pro-American heritage, Spadolini maintains that it is legitimate to ask Washington to conceive its economic policy in terms of co-operation with Europe. This is all the more necessary because U.S. monetary policy is creating difficulties in Europe just when Washington is asking its allies to make good on their defense commitments.

If these various Italian needs were misunderstood by Rome's allies, it would be regrettable. Something is changing in Italy, as it is in Europe. Many say that the new govcrument represents a historie development. I don't know about that, but surely it is not just business as usual.

The truth is probably somewhere around midpoint between these two deductions. The Russians and the Cubans do not have to exert themselves very much to win the band of friendship from the revolutionary forces in Central America: and their strategic ambitions in that part of the world are limited. In El Salvador, it is pushing for a team of outside mediators made up of social and Christian democrats to discuss with all the parties a political com-promise that would avert the "de-leat" of either side. This would be followed by an election. In Nicaragua, the Socialist International be-lieves that the Sandinistas can be wooed away from the Soviet carpo by economic aid combined with political sympathy.

That leaves the question of Ni-

Modified Mastectomy Found to Be Effective

By Jane E. Brody

New York Times Service NEW YORK — Surgery that spares most of the hreast can be as effective as radical mastectomy in treating women with early hreast cancer, according to a major study done in Italy and published this week in The New England Journal of Medicine.

The study, considered the best of its kind to date, has thus far shown no difference in cancer recurrence or survival between women who had a partial mastectomy followed by radiation therapy and women who underwent the older, more disfiguring operation.

Although previous studies suggested this, the new study is the

U.S. Company Blends Styles

PARIS — "Vacuum," the first production of Chris Hardman's new Antenna company, is theater that presents American archetypes with visual methods derived from the Oriental stage.

The company, based in Sausali-to, Calif., and a division of Snake Theater, which Hardman cofounded in 1972, continues Snake's mixing of non-Western theatrical traditions with American image-making. Hardman cited lodooesian masked dancing and "the simplicity of Kabuki" as in-fluences, and says he first learned "how to make a visual theater" from Peter Schumann's Bread and Puppet, which he worked with more than 10 years ago.

Using a "public research pro-cess" — questionnaires, telephone and radio interviews, on-the-street interviews - the voices of housewives, salesman and others provide most of the quadrophoni-cally taped text.

Ernesto Sanchez, a mime, and Michele Larsson, a dancer, act out the story in movement; wearing la-tex masks modeled on real people, they "become image and not ac-tor," Hardman says. As the text moves from vacuum cleaners to other references to the title, Walter the Salesman learns in confronting Mary the Housewife that what he is really selling is himself.

After several Paris performances, the company moves to West Germany, starting in Karlsruhe on Saturday, Tübingen, July 5, and Konstanz, July 7.

In the words of one resident, Elvis today is "bigger than the Missis-sippi River." Last year the city put a statue of Elvis at one end of Beale Street, birthplace of the blues. Beale Street is blue today, black and blue, peeling and not patched; it resembles Berlin in 1945. There has been vague talk of urban re-newal for a decade, but the financing just never comes through Beale Street, which has been de clared a national historic landmark by the federal government, is black history, not white, and in the words of another Memphian: What did Elvis Presley ever do on Beale Street but steal our music?"

and nothing-is-sacred mood, the Daily Star irreverently came up with "A Potty Way to Mark the Big Day," a piece of information to the effect that somebody once produced a royal chamber pot sou-venir to mark Prince Albert and Queen Victoria's wedding, 141 years ago. "Queen Victoria was clearly oot amused," they say. Also irreverent is a magazine article headlined Should anyone marry as young as Lady Di?" The answer, from quite a few people who have had to do their own house-

British Airways' in-flight magazine, High Life, has a Come to Britain flag on the cover, next to a smiling and rather fetching Lady Diana, nicknamed "Charlie's Angel." LILLE, France — The entire Agache-Willot group must help the Boussac Saint Frères textile company out of its financial difficulties, the newly appointed bead of the Agache-Willot group said Thursday.

Albert Chassagnon told employee representatives that Boussac, which was put into receivership last week, will require immediate financial aid of 350 million francs (about $61 million) a month to cover its operating costs and thus continue to operate.

Boussac employs more than 20,000 workers in 80 textile mills. French Labor Minister Jean Auroux has said be will outline the government's position Friday.

Alsthom-Atlantique in Deal with Hazemeyer AP-Dow Jones

PARIS — Alsthom-Atlantique, the French heavy electrical engineering and shipbuilding group, said Thursday it has agreed with Societé Hazemeyer, a wholly-owned subsidiary of Hazemeyer of the Netherlands, with a view to rationalizing their activities in the field of lowtension electrical equipment.

Alsthom-Atlantique, whose major shareholder is the Cie Générale d'Electricité group, said the decision was motivated by the desire to create a unit of international dimensions. Financial details of the agreement were not disclosed.

Alsthom-Atlantique will take over the low-tension electrical equipment manufacturing activities of Hazemeyer at its plant at Saint-Quentin, north of here, where Alsthom-Atlantique has a plant producing similar products. Hazemeyer will continue to market the products covered by the accord through its sales network under its own trade mark.

Braniff Agrees with Banks on Debt Deferral

DALLAS - Braniff International has reached agreement with 37 lender banks and insurance companies under which all payments on the company's debt will be deferred until Feb. 1, 1982, the owner of Braniff

Braniff and the lenders will begin talks on reaching agreement in principle in early autumn on a complete restructuring of Braniff's pri-vate debt of close to $700 million. Final documentation of the restructuring will be completed before Feb. 1, 1982.

Braniff said in its annual report for 1980 it could not continue operating unless it was able to reschedule its debt, of which $40 million was due Thursday. Braniff said that no interest will be charged on all its debt from July 1 to next Feb. 1.

BL Selling Alvis Military Vehicle Offshoot

LONDON - BL Motor will sell its profitable Alvis offshoot, makes military vehicles, to United Scientific Holdings for £27 million ($54 million), Britain's ailing state-owned automaker said Thursday. It said the sale was in line with its policy of concentrating on its main activities of producing cars, trucks and buses.

Lafarge Denies Breaking Pact with Portland

MONTREAL — Canada Cement Lafarge, the subsidiary of France's Lafarge Coppee, has not violated any agreement with General Portland in connection with its takeover bid of $45 a share, company president John Redfern said Thursday.

He said Lafarge has not reviewed the papers filed in connection with a General Portland suit against Lafarge but that "we intend vigorously to defend the claims against us."

Portland has obtained a temporary restraining order from a Texas court preventing Lafarge from violating the terms of an agreement with it. Portland alleges that Lafarge agreed not to purchase Portland's shares without approval from Portland's board.

Jobless Rate In U.S. Drops 0.3% in June

Statistical Change Qualifies Analysis

United Press International
WASHINGTON — The U.S. unemployment rate unexpectedly dropped in June to 7.3 percent, but the decline is not a believable trend" because of large technical swings in the figures, the Labor Department reported Thursday.

The monthly measurement showed the biggest shrinkage in the civilian labor force on record, 1.2 million in June. That was apparently the result of an earlier than usual end of the college school year, which confused the seasonal adjustment process, said Jack Bregger, Bureau of Labor statistics analyst. The result was an unemployment rate that seemed to

'It's not a believeable trend.' Mr. Bregger said.
In addition to June's record drop in the civilian labor force, the Lahor Department bousehold survey showed a similar 840,000 drop in employment, more than during the sharp recessions of last year and the mid-1970s.

Mr. Bregger said that "840,000 is incredibly large ... essentially a correction for increases in carlier

Unemployment traditionally rises in June as many young people leave school to enter the labor market, a factor compensated for in the government's seasonal adjustment formula for the month.

But this year, many colleges ended the school year in early May, and students had already secured jobs by June. As a result, the government's seasonal adjustments over-corrected and drove the total June unemployment rate down.

Mr. Bregger said his department had no choice but to stick with the figures, despite the obvious dis-crepancies. We were certainly not going to fudge the data just to make it look right," he said.

U.S. Pensions Widen Overseas Holdings

NEW YORK — Ouce, majot U.S. pension funds, fearful of unfamiliar markets and gyrating cur-rencies, kept their cash boldings at home. But today, a U.S. pension manager, having decided that there are opportunities to be found in the world outside the New York Stock Exchange, may include in his portfolio share: of a Japanese drug maker or a Hong Kong land company.

Foreign boldings of U.S. corporate pension funds are growing rapidly. In 1980, they increased 85 percent from the previous year, to $3.25 billion from $1.75 billion, according to Intersec Research, a firm that monitors pension-fund investments. Intersec said that total corporate pension assets amount to $300 billion. The firm predicted that by 1985, funds in-vested abroad could reach $25 bil-to Morgan Guaranty. During the production for the next three months were announced Thursday by the EEC Commission. The announcement was made as ambassadors of European community states met to try to overcome Italian objections to part of an agreement on measures to help the crisis-hit steel industry reached by

EEC industry ministers last week. EEC steel firms will have to cut output of products derived from steel coils, accounting for some 45 per cent of EEC production, by between 17 and 28 percent compared to an average of their production levels at set times during the past seven years.

They will also be obliged to cut reinforcing bars, used chiefly in the construction industry, by 30 percent for the period from Wednesday until the end of September the Commission said.

These are the products over which the Commission is maintaining emergency production curbs over the next year. The cuts are designed to raise prices and help return the EEC's loss-making steel industry to profitability. The sources said Italy accepted the extension of the Commission's emergency powers over steel production and an accord to eliminate

Many small foreign markets are thin; a transaction involving a $1 million block of stock, for in-stance, can disrupt trading. For-

The index for the Hong Kong market maintained by Capital International of Geneva ranged be-tween 471 and 1,101 last year. And, finally, financial disclosure practices overseas are not up to

U.S. standards... "Published earnings aren't real earnings," cautioned Landon Thomas, executive vice president of Fiduciary Trust in New York. 'Research is essential.'

New Fervor Thrives in Canada

In a country where much of the economy is dominated by outsiders and where the en-trepreneurial class tends to be cautious and conservative (when it is not reduced to outright management of branch plants), individuals and com-panies of modest size by world standards have been displaying so much

NEW YORK — Major U.S. oil companies are expected to report an overall earnings decline of about 10 percent in their first full quarter free of federal price and allocation controls, analysis say. As in recent quarters, higher prices than those a year earlier for U.S. crude oil will belp company earnings in the three months ended June 30. But that benefit largely will be washed away, when the companies begin reporting in about three weeks, by lower profits on refined products as a result of a world surplus of oil. The glut reflects both lower consumption and continued high levels of output by Saudi Arabia. The so-called windfall profits tax and weak results in other business areas will further crode the companies' results.

The new unregulated status of the companies, along with the wide disparity in oil prices charged by different producing countries, will mean that the results for the oil companies will vary widely, analysts say. In addition, currency translations, accounting methods, and the coal strike will further mix results for the quarter.

For the first time in years, oil company profits will not be a po-litical issue. President Reagan's decision to lift all price and alloca-tion controls at the end of January ended domestic political debate

Saudi Ties

Production by Saudi Arabia will also affect company results. Saudi Oil Minister Sheikh Ahmed Zaki Yamani, who previously made it elear that the profits of the oil companies were part of the king-dom's future pricing plans, bas focused his attention recently on the high-priced members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries. Saudi Arabia is trying to force other OPEC members into line with a unified price and a Saudi pricing formula.

The outcome of that struggle largely will dictate future Saudi production levels. An agreement coupled with a Saudi cuthack probably would lead to tighter oil markets and improved oil company earnings. But if prices and production remain stable and con-sumption continues to drop, it will be difficult for oil companies to boost profits this year. While future market conditions remain hazy, analysts noted that the year-to-year comparisons will become easier in the third and fourth quarters because earnings slumped dring the second half of

Prices Slide on NYSE As Banks Raise Prime

From Agency Dispatches

NEW YORK — Prices on the New York Stock Exchange skidded Thursday after a raily attempt was squashed by an increase in the prime lending rate. Pre-holiday trading was moderate.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which jumped nearly two points at the outset after (alling 9.22 points Wednesday, was off 8.47 points to close at 959.19. The average had retreated 39 points in the previous six sessions after breaking the 1,000 level.

Declines led advances, 946 to 448, among the 1,920 issues traded. The volume on the NYSE was 45.1 million shares, down from the 49 million traded Wednesday.

Prices were lower in moderate trading of American Stock Exchange issues.

Analysis said selling intensified after Chase Manhattan Bank, the third largest in the United States, and the First National Bank of Chase Manhattan and Marine Midland said separately Thursday that they raised their broker loan rates to 20% percent from 20 percent. Earlier in the day Chemical Bank raised its broker loan rate to 201/2 percent.

These moves resulted from news that the federal funds rates banks charge one another for overnight loans rose and show no signs of heading lower at a time when the nation's money supply growth has been slower than anticipated.

The money supply growth slow-down had raised hopes the Federal Reserve would ease credit restrictions. But it has not done so.

GAO Raises Doubts on Ex-Im Bank

WASHINGTON - The U.S. Export-Import Bank is running out of money because of its policy of matching other governments low interest loans to exporters, the General Accounting Office says.

The congressional investigation agency said in a report Wednesday that the U.S. government bank's ability to remain self-supporting in the future "is now in doubt." Ex-Im Bank has traditionally been self-sustaining, but it is faced with a probable operating loss next year and rising losses in later years.

The report said that in meeting concessionary financing by foreign governments the Ex-Im Bank which helps finance exports, had kept its interest rates low, borrowing money at more than 13 percent and reloaning it at 9 percent or

Compounding the problem, the report said, was the government's failure to negotiate changes in 1978 international guidelines on minimum interest rates and repayment terms for government export loans. The United States considers France to be the main obstacle to a

Japan, France Compete

TOKYO (Reuters) — Japan's Export-Import Bank said Thursday that it is considering supplying a loan outside guidelines of the Or-ganization for Economic Coopera-tion and Development for a Tunisian cement plant project, valued at 45 billion yen ($197 million), to match a mixed credit France is understood to be offering.

Japan's loan for 20 years with annual interest at about 6 percent is below the OECD's guidelines for officially-supported export credits, which call for a minimum interest rate of 7.75 percent and a maximum loan period of 10 years in Tunisia's case. However, the bank said, the OECD allows deviation where a loan has more than 25-percent grant element.

France is understood to be offering a mixed credit for the project; using funds from Caisse Central de Cooperation Economique, an aid organization for offidevelopment assistance, to take advantage of the deviation clause, the Japanese bank said.

company had loans outstanding of $10 million to the DBS and of 28 million Singapore dullars to the West German bank.

Substantial Losses

The group as a whole, including both Rollei Braunschweig and Rollei Singapore, has been incurring continuing and substantial losses since 1975.

Up to the end of 1980, accumulated total group loss was about 400 million Deutsche marks. Negative factors that forced Rollei Braunschweig to apply for formal receiver-ship included Japanese competition, the ris-ing U.S. and Singapore dollar and yen exchange rates against the Deutsche mark, as well as rising interest rates.

Last week Rollei Singapore announced it would continue its present operations despite the fact that Rollei-Braunschweig had applied for insolvency proceedings in Ger-

Norddeutsche Landeshank, which has already written off 600 million DM of loans made to the camera company, bas said it re-mains Rollei's principal creditor.

NEW ISSUE

U.S. Rests Case in Bid to Break Up AT&T

By Peter Behr

Washington Post Service
WASHINGTON — The Justice
Department has rested its case in the antitrust suit seeking to hreak up American Telephone & Telegraph and has begun the wait for counter-attacks from AT&T and. perhaps, the White House.

After introducing a final group of documents Wednesday, the de-partment's chief trial attorney, Jerpartners's case to a close, following 61 days of testimony hy 93 winnesses.

U.S. District Judge Harold Greene praised both sides for moving the trial so smoothly through its first phase. To Mr. Connell, he said "Without indicating anything said, "Without indicating anything at all about the merits, you did manage in four months to properly present your side of the case." Mr. Connell told reporters that he was "very pleased" with the government's case, which accuses AT&T of conspiring to elminate or frustrate competition in the markets for telecommunications equipment and intercity phone ser-

George Saunders, AT&T's lead attorney, said he, too, thought the government had told its story They gave an opportunity for anyone who has a complaint against the Bell System to testify," he said. "I don't think they've told a new story. ... I think the story is a weak one."

Mr. Saunders said the company was ready to begin its defense on Monday by calling Dr. Ian Ross, president of Bell Laboratories, AT&T's research arm, the first of an expected 350 to 450 defense witnesses. But Judge Greene called a month's recess, and the defense will begin presenting its case on

Defense Ready

Both Mr. Saunders and Mr Connell said they expect the trial to conclude late this year and said they had no idea where the Reagan administration stands on the case, which has divided some of President Reagan's chief Cabinet advis-

special Cabinet-level task

government abandon the case on grounds that it is disrupting the telecommunications industry at a time when foreign competition is becoming a serious threat, according to administration officials. Commerce Secretary Malcolm Bal-drige has said that he disagrees with the Justice Department's plan to break up AT&T, and Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger has said that AT&T's communica-tions network is too important to the national security to be subjected to antitrust prosecution. But that thrust was stalled, at least for a time, following a report-edly inconclusive review of the issue hy Mr. Reagan and Cabinet officials two weeks ago. Instead. William Baxter, assistant attorney general and head of the antitrust division, who favors continuing the litigation, was asked to suggest a legislative plan for dividing AT&T into smaller pieces that would satisfy the Justice Depart-ment, officials said.

Justice Department spokesman Tom DeCair said Wednesday he believes that no final decisions have been made on the telecommunications issues.

Britain Records Fall In Currency Reserve

LONDON — Britain's gold and foreign currency reserves fell $856 million in June to $25.63 billion. the Treasury said.

The reserves showed an underlying fall of $388 million, excluding new borrowing and repayments, the biggest drop since October, 1979. This underlying fall suggests rather heavy intervention by the Bank of England in the foreign exchange markets to smoothe erratic movements of the pound, foreign exchange market sources said.

Despite the tremendous stakes in the case, it has been a model of courtroom brevity and geniality, both sides agreed, in sharp contrast with the Justice Department's much longer and contentious antitrust suit against International Business Machines.

Judge Greene took part in some hanter Wednesday about the vol-leyball contests between Justice and AT&T trial teams at a joint picnic last week. "I've gotten some publicity about being athletic at the volleyball game that will surprise my friends no end," said

The bantering continued at the close of Wednesday's session. Asked hy reporters to cite some highlights of the government's case. Mr. Connell mentioned a surprise witness from a small AT&T competitor, Telesciences. who said his company was unsuc-cessful in selling its telephone monitoring equipment to Bell affiliates despite its superior quality compared with Beil's Western Electric equipment.

"Don't get too far out on that limb. Jerry." Mr. Saunders told him. "We're getting ready to saw it off."

But trends that are often contraportunistic Canadian companies

— aided and abetted by Canadian banks — can fearlessly conduct raids on United States compadictory also help to account for Canadian financial aggressiveness. The energy campaign appears to be moving faster than anticipated, and the betting now is that Ottawa's goal of reducing foreign ownership of Canada's oil and gas vernment's nationalist aims are production from more than 70 per-cent to 50 percent by 1990 will be achieved sooner than that. But the National Energy Program is being fought not only by foreign interests but also by a lot of Canadian interests. Ottawa is seeking to increase its share of the revenues largely at the expense of the private producers, and this is blamed in part for a slowdown of exploration activity in the western provinces and a rush of money and equipment to the United States. Also helping to explain the flow of Canadian money southward are such things as the Reagan administration's decontrol of oil prices, a U.S. investment climate viewed by Canadian businessmen as more congenial than the interventionist policies of the Liberal administration in Canada and lower inflation in the United States.

BOOKS

WHERE THE JACKALS HOWL AND OTHER STORIES By Amos Oz A Helen and Kurt Wolff Book.

Harcourt Brace Jovanovich, 757 Third Ave., New York 10017.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

WHAT is it like, the emotional life W of people who exist in a con-stant state of crisis? Does the political cheat, or does it intensify, the personal? Do deeply felt causes constrict or expand character? These are some of the questious raised by "Where the Jackals How!" by the Israeli author Amos Oz

Though Oz is a powerful writer, one feels a lack of improvisation in his people. Their behavior seems so linear compared to the erratic patterns of people in American fiction. At first, they seem to be all doctrine and no impulse. But then you see how even a perpetual state of war encourages a curious kind of romance. It makes you alert to weather, for example, to night sounds, to terrain. You think more about human mouves than other people do. All your actions are shadowed by history.

In "Nomad and Viper," Arabs overran an early kibbutz and a doctri-naire young Israeli woman finds herself fascinated by the sheer irrationality of a ferocious Arab shepherd. He is ty of a terocious Arab snephert. He is so absolutely other that she experiences him as a negative mirror. In "The Way of the Wind," a young man whose father is a severe ideologue tries to win his love by doing a dangerous and fatal trick with a parachute.

In "Before His Time," a man slaughters a great bull that has stiddealy become sterile, then stubs out his cigarette on the dying animal's forehead. After some hesitation, we understand this as the despairing ges-ture of an overpoliticized man to whom everything has become meta-phor. Oz's stories have a kind of bleak, embattled humor, too, as in the case of a commander who takes along a misfit into combat as a joke, only to see him killed.

MARY ROBISON is growing on me. When I read "Days," her recent book of short stories. I was in-terested but skeptical. I saw her writing as a sort of deliberate counterpoint to the actual, just as in certain kinds of jazz singing, the vocalist sings against the melody. In Freudian analysis, a dream often means the opposite of its manifest content, and in Robison's fiction, something like this seems to be going on too. It's remark-able what an effect you can get if you look at the world upside down. Or imagine a Surrealist painting in which people's organs and entrails are outside, instead of in. Would it be repugnant or sexy? mant, or sexy? He can act so reasonable that he fools you, one character in "Oh!" says about another. There is an implication all through the book that when anyone is reasonable, he is acting. We only act reasonable. Or as another character says, "I'm just a person trying."

The people in "Oh!" like to watch bad movies on television, and there is a sense in which experimental fiction is like an old, bad movie. Neither is much interested in ordinary reality. Bad movies can't handle it and advanced fiction takes the position that it has already been handled too much. It's also possible that a genuinely bad movie on late night television tells your more about the culture than a novel by, say, Mary Gordon. Perhaps the socret of its significance lies in the relation between the movie and its audience. Perhaps we can learn to see an entire novel as a sort of Homericconceit-objective-correlative.

At any rate, I found myself accepting the characters in "Oh!" When

You know that something is chewing on something else. When I thought I had termites in my house, my handyman tasted the sawdist and said no. He can taste real destruction.

So can Mary Robison. She's some thing of a goarmet of various kinds of collapse. A 57-year-old man says of his 40-year-old fiancee that only her neck and her knees are old. Chrisloves Maureen not m spite of the fact. that she is thin, with minute breasts and badly bleached hair, but because of it. She has pathos, and that's whathe needs. 80 Races at Henley Opening

By Norman Hildes-Heim New York Times Service

HENLEY-ON-THAMES, England - Eighty races were contested Thursday in the first rounds of the 142d year of the Henley Royal

The spectators witnessed few close races, es the weaker entries are tradinonnaly sorted out on the 1st day. Verdicts of "easily," Henley's terminology for victories of more than five boat lengths, proliferated. Most of the American "selected," or seeded, crews enter the draw Friday, baving left the unhelded U.S. entries to establish themselves Thursday.

U.S. Strength

American losses were notable by their absence. In an all-American heat of the Visitors' Challenge Cup for coxless fours. Worcester Polytechnic Institute defeated Yale University, which did not help its own cause by erratic steering. Yale's paired-oar crew of J.H. Molbak and T.A. Sherif also went down to defeat in a heat of the Silver Goblets and Nickalls' Challenge Cup. Yale, which had brought 37 oarsmen to compete here this year, the largest contingent of any U.S. crew in recent memory, saw its junior varsity heavyweight and bightweight eight-oared crews advance in the Ladies' Challenge Plate and Thames Cup events, re-

Little Progress In Negotiating Baseball Strike

NEW YORK - Negotiations have resumed in the 3-week-old strike by major league baseball players, but after Wednesday's session neither side saw much chance for an early settlement

"Am I optimistic? No," said management representative Ray Grebey, Commented Marvin Miller, executive director of the Major League Players Association: Mr. Grebey said there was no progress. I find nothing to disagree with there."

Miller appeared at negotiations for the first time since the strike began. "The players felt I ought to be back," he said, "There were two weeks of futile meetings. It [his absense] was a phony issue and I wanted to defuse it."

The club owners used Wednesday's session to alter certain aspects of their latest proposal on compensation for ranking free agents — the strike's only issue. "They revised their formula ever so slightly," Miller said. "The gap is so wide it defies vocabulary to describe it." Grebey agreed: There are wide differences between us still."

Both sides agreed to return to Thursday.

Kent (Conn.) School, inelligible for the Princess Elizabeth Cup for schoolboy eights because the crew had a 20-year-old in its boat, had the double misfortune of baving to compete in the higher-standard Thames Challenge Cup and draw-ing the British national lightweight team 8, which recorded the fastest time of the day — 6.52 — in defeating Kent by three-quarters of a boat length, or 40 feet, after racing over the Henley course distance of one and five-sixteenths

Holy Spirit had more trouble in its boat than from Saint Ignetius College, its Irish opponent, which Spirit defeated by three and three-quarters

Dysentery

Six of the crew's eight oarsmen have been fighting dysentery, and Stan Bergman, Holy Spirit's coach said: "I wasn't sure we would be able to race. Only our stroke and seven men have escaped being sick — they held the crew together." Holy Spirit is favorite for the cup, which it won in 1974 and 1976, if the crew recovers its health.

Friday the first heats of the Grand Challenge Cup, Henley's premier event, will be rowed. Yale, Cornell and Boston University all enter the draw, while Washington University has a bye, Yale is favored in "the Grand," and the greatest U.S. interest in Yale's heat will be shown by Washington's

Inmates Pardon Reformed Phils

PHILADELPHIA - Gary Maddox and Larry Bowa returned to the city prison where a year ago inmates roasted them for choking in big games. But this time they got a heroes' welcome. "These guys are great sports fans," said Bowa after about 150 inmates at Holmesburg Prison mobbed him and Maddox Wednesday night.

Last year, Bowa, Maddox and Mike Schmidt were heckled for not having reached the World Series and for losing key games. "I promise you that when we return, we'll bring a Phillies World Series film with us," Schmidt promised then, Because of a scheduling conflict, Schmid1 couldn't make the return visit. But his teammates brought the movie of the Phils' World Series victory:

Prisoner questions centered on the strike. "I hope it'll be over any day now," Bowa said to cheers. "We miss baseball as much as you do. We passed a couple of guys out in the hallways who told us. You guys have got to get back."

But Maddox drew hoots by saying the strike was costing him about $100.000 a month.

Strike not a Windfall For Struggling NASL

NEW YORK - If soccer club owners were boping to lure baseball-starved fans in droves to the North American Soccer League during the baseball players strike, they've been disappointed.

"Our attendance improved by four," said Lolly Keys, a spokes-woman for the California Surf soccer club, comparing attendance figures for her team's game just before the June 12 start of the baseball players strike and a recent game. "Obviously," she said, "the strike has done nothing for us."

The Seals share Anaheim Stadium with the American League California Angels. The Los Angeles Dodgers play nearby.

While no soccer executive admits any desire to capitalize on baseball's woes, they privately reliab the increased media exposure. In New York newspapers, the Cosmos got headlines on the leading sports page several times, a rarity during the baseball season.

"Our print coverage isn't any better," Keys continued. "However, on television, where before we had trouble getting the scores on-now we get not only the scores, but tapes of all the goals.

"We don't feel at this time that they [basebal] fans] are our audi-ence," Scallen said, "The soccer fan is younger, and 40 percent of our fans are female. More are college graduates. We have yet to pick up a whole lot of business from the [Minnesota] Twins, although 1 assume as the strike goes on we may get a few more."

Newspapers are giving soccer stories a tad better placement. but hardly more than usual, he said. "We were ahead in attendance prior to the strike, but we've had such terrible weather, which may be the reason," Scallen added.

'But, ... So Maybe'

The Seattle Sounders, which have one of the strongest followings in the league, also reported business as usual, "Our attendance for the last two games has been lower than before the strike, which could be because we lost five of seven games," said Sheri McCoun, the Sounders' ticket operations manager. last argument with the umpire. claiming that a service was long. Said McEnroe: "Please, just one call in my favor. Say you saw it wasn't in." Grime told him: "I saw the ball as good, and the electronic line machine confirmed it."

McEnroe at last clinically finished things off, taking the 12th game to love and completing his delayed victory with an ace. McEnroe tersely nodded to the umpire, picked up his rackets and stalked to the dressing room, barely allowing Frawley to pick up his own equipment and walk back

At a news conference after the match, McEnroe said, "I can't even breathe, umpires are always lonking at me," McEnroe said lat-

He got angry with reporters who asked if he staged scenes on court to rattle his opponent. "You know nothing about ten-

The Hot Dog Myth

By Russell Baker

NEW YORK - The Moral Majority and the Fourth of July remind me of hot dogs. The Fourth of July reminds me of hot dogs because for years I have felt an obligation to eat hot dogs on this holiday. Hot dogs seemed like the patriotic thing to eat. I could blame this oo the Chevrolet people. For two or three years now they have been broadcasting a radio spiel suggesting that hot dogs, apole ole and Chevrolet represent the apex of patriotism. The truth is, however, that I feel no patriotic duty to buy a Chevrolet or eat aplo fact, I haven't eaten apple pie in several years. Apple pic hasn't been any good since Mom quit making it and the frozen-pastry industry took over the job.

Baker

I recall numerous movies made during World War II in which American boys told Fascist beasts they would be soundly defeated because they were up against a whole nation fighting for the two-pants suit, the Brooklyn Dodgers und Mom's homemade apple pie.

Well, maybe the Fascists tri-umphed after all, since the twopants suit, the Brooklyn Dodgers and Mom's apple pie have all been wiped out. Nevertheless, I thought the pie, at least, well worth deline onade, another indispensable adjunct to Fourth of July cuisine at one time, though now scarcely fit to cool your feet in.

To be frank about it, hot dogs aren't any good either, but the problem goes beyond that. I have a terrible suspicion that hot dogs were not ever any good. This is what makes me think of the Moral

The Morai Majority seems to be composed of people under the impression that the modern age has destroyed something that was good in the past and determined to restore those old excellences. I am in agreement as regards apple pie, the two-pants suit, the Brooklyn Dodgers and lemonade, and might even join up if they could persuade Ronald Reagan to bring back these splendors.

I remember the hot dog back in the macaroni-and-cheese age when it seemed the dandiest thing you could sink your teeth in, but that may have been because almost any comestible would have produced yelps of delight after long engagement with macaroni and cheese

The 1981 hot dog is certainly very inferior eating, whether concocted of chicken remnants or more traditional stuff, whether cheap or lancy. Variations in quality make no real difference. In my opinion, the hot dog is inferior eating because the hot dog is a very inferior idea, whose duliness has managed to escape public attention under camouflage of pickles. onioo and mustard.

Why this should be the quintesseoce of patriotic cating when such glories as the crab cake, fried sausage and liver pudding wrapped in pancake are available, I cannot Maybe we are suckers for sales-men's myths. Maybe simple guilibility accounts for our faith in golden ages, which leads us to train for passe that rever exists. There is a touch of this in the Moral Majority's passion for restoring a golden age of sexual behavior when everyone was a virgin unto the marriage bed, except for wretched sinners who paid for their derelictions in suffering and shame, thereby earning themselves a chance to square their debts to Did such an age ever really exist? Real leave ade and Mon's apple pie did. I remember them distinct-On the other hand, the anecdotes told by men 30 and 40 years ago, if believed, strongly suggested that virgins even then were almost as rare as the dodo bird.

This does not mean that the golden age of sexual behavior did not exist at some earlier time. Not in the 1920s, of course. They weren't called "Roaring" for noth-ing. Perhaps back in the 19th ceny, but Americans then had a different view of morality. Half of them thought slavery was swell. My guess is that the golden sexual past has a lot in common with the golden age of the hot dog.

Oh, well, what matter? It's the Fourth of July. Let's be thankful nobody has got around yet to ruin-ing watermelon.

Bonding Patterns: 007's Women

By Judy Klemesrud New York Tunes Service

NEW YORK — They always seem to wear the skimpiest of bikinis, and they often carry weapons - perhaps even a mini-ature A-bomb. Their hair is long, their smiles are pouty and their names are memorable. First there was Hooeychile Rider (played by Ursula Andress), and later came Pussy Galore (Honor Blackman), Kissy Suzuki (Mie Hama). Tif-fany Case (Jill St. John) and Holly Goodhead (Lois Chiles).

In the film business, they are known as "the Bond girls." because they are the chief love interests of James Bond, British Secret Service Agent 007, in the Ian Fleming adventure series. With the 12th Bond film, "For Your Eyes Only," another Bond girl has been added to the roster. Her hair is long, her smile is pouty, and her real name is more memorable than that of the character she plays. She is Carole Bouquet. a dark-haired, green-eyed, 23-year-old French actress who won acclaim in 1977 in Luis Bunuel's film, "That Obscure Object of Desire.

In "For Your Eves Only," she plays Melina Havelock, a half-Greek, half-English marine archaeologist who sets out to avenge the murders of her parents. Along the way she en-counters James Bond (played, for the fifth time, by Roger Moore) and they join forces against the

Low Profile

So far, Miss Bouquet has been keeping a low profile in relation to the new film. She was the only major star to be excluded from the film's publicity tour, and one reason, according to Myer Beck, the New York representative for the film's producer, Albert R. (Cubby) Broccoli, is that she was "improfessional and troublesome while making the film; she even went to sleep on the set." It probably did oot help when she said in an interview that Roger Moore was old enough to be her father rather than her lover (he is 53).

This makes her different from most of the past Bond girls, who were eager to help publicize their respective films, and, by extension, their careers, Britt Ekland, who played Mary Goodnight in

FRENCH PROVINCES

"The Man With the Golden Gun," in 1974, said in an interview: "Doing a Bond film is 30 percent performance and 70 percent publicity. The publicity campaign begins the day you start shooting, and you have to do a photo session a week for a year, and you have to be lightly elad. The bikini isn't mandatory, but - " She broke into laughter. Miss Ekland's career, like that of many of the Bond girls, never really took off after she made "The Man With the Golden Gun." She is now publicizing ber candid book of memoirs. "True Britt," and she recently did a cameo role in the CBS mini-series, "Valley of the Dolls."

The two actresses who had what are perhaps the most successful post-Bond careers are Diana Rigg and Jane Seymour, both British. Miss Rigg played Tracy Vicenzo in "On Her Majesty's Secret Service" (1966), one of the two women to marry James Bood on the screen. Perhaps as a result, she wound up being machine-gunned to death by a villain. (George Lazenby played his only Bond in this film.) Miss Seymour played Soli-taire, a virgin with remarkable telepathie powers, in "Live and Let Die" (1973), in which Moore first played Bond, succeeding Sean Connery, who starred in six of the films, and Lazenby.

Miss Rigg was an actress of note in England before she became widely known there as Emma Peel of TV's "The Avengers." After the Bond film, she was nominated for a Tony award for her performance in "Abelard and Heloise" on Broadway in 1971. She is now in Spain making a film based on an Agatha Chris-tie mystery, "Evil Uoder the Sun," with Peter Usinov, James Mason and Maggie Smith.

Impressive Performances

Miss Seymour, a former ballet dancer, followed up her Bond role with impressive performances in films, television and on Broadway. Miss Seymour, who expects a baby around Christmas, recently left the cast of "Amadeus" on her doctor's orders. She plans to marry David Flynn, her manager, on July 18. Another actress, also British, who has managed to keep busy is

Honor Blackman, who played Pussy Galore, the tough-as-nails pilot and judo expert who succumbs to Bond's romantic attentions in "Goldfinger" (1964). Like Miss Rigg after her, Miss Blackman was also well known in Britain in "The Avengers."

Miss Blackman, who is divorced, lives in a London suburb with her two teen-age children. She said she had become "mad for musicals," and recently did a national tour in the lead of "A Little Night Music." On Aug. 17, she will open in a production of "The Sound of Music," in which she will play the countess. "Be-lieve it or oot, I sing," she said.

Is there a philosophy behind the selection of a Bond girl? According to Broccoli, who has either co-produced or produced all 12. Bond films and who has the major say in the casting, "We always tried to get a girl who was like Ursula." He was referring to Ursula Andress, the very first Bond girl, Honeychile Rider, in "Doctor No" (1962).

"Ursula was an unknown when we cast her," he recalled. "We picked her picture out of a pile of rejects. She was dripping wet, and she looked beautiful. So we made a deal for her. When I got to Jamaica for the filming, was this beautiful creature, and I thought she was great, and I knew then that she was the type of girl we should use for future leading ladies — an unknown with a new face who wouldn't demand an outrageous salary."

Miss Andress was another Bond girl whose career never seemed to catch fire. She went on to appear in a number of unheralded films. Miss Andress, who is in her mid-40s, is currently in "Clash of the Titans" with Harry Hamlin, her companion for several years and the father of her vear-old son.

"Ursula is still my favorite of all," Broccoli said. "She was the crème de la crème. Diana Rigg was great, and Barbara Bach and Honor Blackman were good, but Ursula stands out because she's a Orsina stands out because suc s a terrific beauty we picked from a photograph who could do all the things ahe was supposed to do. She was not at all like some of the others, who caused all sorts of problems behind the scenes and didn't get along with us. I won't name them, but I will say this: They became difficult and

Where Are They Now?

Here's what some of the other Bond girls are up to these days: Daniela Bianchi, who played Ta-tiana Romanova, the Russian girl who tries to defect in "From Russia, With Love" (1963), has pretty much retired from films d lives in Rome with her hushand, a physician. Claudine Auger, the former Miss France who played Domino in "Thunderhall' (1965), is making a film in Paris, where she lives, Mie Hama, who played Kissy Suzuki in "You only Live Twice" (1967) marry James Bond on the screen, now appears mainly on television dramas and talk shows in Japan. where she lives with her husband and three chidren. Jill St. John, who played Tiffany Case in "Diamonds are Forever" (1971), has made few films since. Most of her publicity in the 1970s was as a frequent dinner companion of Henry A. Kissinger, then President Nixon's oational security adviser. Barbara Bach, who played Maj. Anya Amasova in "The Spy Who Loved Me" (1977), recently married the for-mer Beatle Ringo Starr. Lois Chiles, who played Holly Good-head in "Moonraker" (1979), has been taking acting lessons. A spokesman for Miss Chiles said she was trying to "turn her career around to be a serious actress, and oot trade on her beauty."

and who was the first actress to

Although not really a "Bond girl," Lois Maxwell has appeared in all 12 of the films, playing Miss Moneypenny, the efficient secretary secretly in love with Agent 007.

"Ian Fleming once told me that he had a lot of plans for Miss Moneypenny and Bond," she said. "But unfortunately, he died before he could put them down on paper. Today Miss Maxwell, 54, has semi-retired from acting to write a three-times-a week human interest column for The Toronto Sun, called "Moneypenny."

ett, the Irish primate martyred 300 years ago for relusing to renounce Roman Catholicism, were flown to London by helicopter for a special commemorative Mass. The service, conducted at Clapham Common in south London, was attended by the current archbishop of Armagh, Cardinal Thomas O Flaich, Phuleett's 19th successor as head of the church in all Ireland. O Fiaich spoke of Plunkett's efforts to achieve understanding between ireland's Protestants and Catholics - and of his death during the reign of England's King Charles IL Because Plunkett refused to obey the Test Acts, which prohibited the celebration of Mass and demanded an oath of allegiance to the Protestant Church of England, he was convicted of treason and, on July 1, 1681, was hanged, drawn and quartered.
